The BFI London Film Festival is an annual film festival founded in 1953 in the United Kingdom, held in the second half of October in collaboration with the British Film Institute. It filters out more than 300 films, documentaries and shorts of about 50 countries. In 1953, a group of critics, including Dase Powell of The Sunday Times, came up with the idea for a film festival for London. The first Film Festival in London was created by James Quinn, and took place at the NFT (National Film Theatre, now renamed BFI Southbank) from 16 to 26 October 1953. Launched after the inauguration of the new NFT at its current site under Waterloo Bridge, it screened 15-20 films from a selection of directors. While the show still retains a sense of 'festivals', it is also now presenting new discoveries from important and exciting talents in world cinema. While it continues to be primarily a public festival, it also featured a large number of film people and journalists from all over the world. Importantly, it offers opportunities for people to see films that otherwise won't get a screening in the UK along with films that will get released in the near future. The festival is top and tail by opening and closing solemnly which have now become major red carpet events in both the London calendar and world premieres, taking place in large venues in central London, featuring the cast and crew of the films, and presented by festival directors and film directors or producers, and often the actors themselves. There are four main cinemas (Odeon, Vue, Cinesworld and Odeon West End) which are usually venues to host the red carpet premiere in Leicester Square. All film production spaces have been officially locked down and all talent - whether on camera or behind it - has been placed in isolation. All film festivals have been cancelled or moved online and cinemas are closed, and the industry faces an uncertain economic future. Below are the details of the new release dates for the major blockbuster films █ Greyhound (streaming now) Tom Hanks stars in and directed this World War II epic about a convoy of ships battling submarines. Apple TV Plus announced May 19 that it will premiere a greyhound on the streaming service, making it one of the biggest movies to skip theaters entirely. It is a coup for Apple's streaming service, which has generated plenty of original content, but there are still some catch-ups to do against Netflix and Amazon Prime Video. Original release date: June 19, 2020 █ Tenet (out now) When the rest of the summer blockbusters were delayed, Warner Bros. held their nerve and stuck to the much more planned date than the rest. Cinemas desperate to reopen, but after shuffling back a few weeks and then moving again to August, Tenet was completely removed from the schedule in mid-July. It finally opened worldwide on August 26 before embarking on select theaters in the U.S. over Labor Day weekend in September. But even if theaters are open, audiences are still wary of convergence, and box office receipts are likely to suffer as a result. Whether you want to risk it or not, read our spoiler-free review of Tenet or our (spoiler packed) explanation of tenet's ending and most WTF questions. Original release date: July 17, 2020 █ One and only Ivan (streaming now) as the cinemas pile up with blockbusters, Disney has moved some of its films from the theatrical schedule straight to the Disney Plus streaming service. You can watch Artemis Fowl and one and only Ivan online after their theatrical releases have been cancelled. Original release date: August 14, 2020 █ The New Mutants (August 28) Easily one of the most problematic films to ever lice into production, the new mutant spinoff X-Men was originally scheduled to be released in 2018, and has been moved twice when Disney's acquisition of Fox set it up again. That turned the fourth rejection into the youth-speckled comic chiller starring Anya Taylor-Joy and Maisie Williams, before a release date in late August was ordered. It was finally released, marking a disappointing end to the X-Men film series. Original release date: April 2020 █ Bill and Ted The Face of Music (streaming now) Keanu Reeves and Alex Winter return in this long-awaited sequel, which bumps into a bit of the schedule - but more importantly, at Comic-Con 2020 creators have announced a day-and-date release on demand so you can watch online even if you can't make it to theaters. Read our review of Bill and Ted Face Music here. Great! Original release date: August 21 █ Mulan (streaming now) Disney's Live Action Malan reboot has been something of a canary in a coal mine for spring and summer movies, as it has been gradually pushed off the calendar before receiving an unexpectedly priced online release. It was first postponed in March, less than two weeks before it was due to open. Disney re-mixed its entire board of games on April 3, and moved Mulan to late July and then August. But when July came to an end and the theater industry wasn't ready yet, Disney completely lowered the schedule - and then, finally, made the decision to release it on the streaming service Disney Plus for an additional fee. Although the big screen is missing, Mulan's new version of 2020 is still timely and exciting (even without the songs). Original release date: March 27, 2020 █ Antebellum (streaming September 18) Janelle Monae stars in this chilling horror story about a modern woman transported to the age of slavery. Originally scheduled to open in April and then August, Antebellum is now skipping theaters for streaming release in September. Original release date: 2020 █ (November 6) originally scheduled for May 1, Marvel's Black Widow postponed to November 6. In March, Disney initially postponed the film to an unspecified date, after which on April 3 it confirmed that Black Widow would premiere this winter in a shuffle of the entire Marvel Cinematic Universe - including Captain Marvel, Thor, Black Panther and Doctor Strange that are expected to be released over the next few years. Original release date: May 1, 2020 █ No time to die (November 20) Daniel Craig's last release as 007, directed by Carrie Fukunaga and written by Phoebe Waller-Bridge, was the first major film to delay its release. No Time to Die has already lost its original director and changed its release date twice, but producers feared that closing many theaters around the world due to the coronavirus would hit the box office in lucrative international markets. The delay was announced on March 4, a week before the World Health Organization declared an epidemic. The James Bond endorsement will now open in the UK on 12 November and 20 November (slightly earlier than previously announced). Original release date: April 2020 █ Soul (November 20) Pixar takes you to a jazz odyssey for this musical animation, which stuck to its scheduled summer release date for a while. Disney has so many films on the schedule that it wasn't clear when there would be a new venue for Saul if theaters remained closed, but now it's been moved to November. Original release date: June 19 █ Free Guy (December 11) A video game-themed action comedy starring Ryan Reynolds was slated for summer, but will now open closer at the end of the year. Original release date: July 3, 2020 █ West Side Story (December 18) Original release date: Unchanged █ coming to 2 America (Dec. 18) Original release date: Unchanged █ Dune (December 18) Original release date: Unchanged █ Wonder Woman 1984 (December 25) Warner Bros. lasted until March 24 before announcing that Wonder Woman 2 would be delayed, but as most other blockbusters were postponed it was clear the DC Comics sequel would have to move to a scheduled June release date. Where many major films moved much later in the year or were taken entirely off the board, Wonder Woman in 1984 originally pledged to hit theaters on August 14 - which proved to be uptimmi, and in mid-June was moved to October and then the holidays instead. Original release date: June 2020 █ Candyman (Unspecified Date, 2021) This horror remake directed by Nia Da Costa and written by Jordan Peele was pushed to September, but with no sign of the theater opening it was attacked for October and then 2021. Original release date: June 12, 2020 █ The French launch (not specified) Wes Anderson returns with a more unique art-housery in The French Dispatch, starring Timothy Chalemet, Bill Murray, Saoirse Ronan, Tilda Swinton and Frances McDormand. Disney bounced this Fox Searchlight movie to October but then in July took it off the schedule. Original release date: July 2020 █ David Attenborough: Life on Earth David Attenborough's latest documentary, made with the World Fund for Nature, has been pushed back to a date yet to be specified. Interestingly, not only was the cinema release cancelled: the film was due to be streamed on Netflix in April, but that too was suspended. Our decision to postpone the release of the film [allows] viewers to enjoy the big screen experience, the WWF said in an email to CNET, also to give Sir David Attenborough's message the incredible reach provided by Netflix's platform. Original release date: April 16, 2020 █ Timeless (Feb 12, 2021) This otherworldly Marvel lineup was scheduled to open in November, but stumbled upon the new year to make way for Black Widow. Original release date: November 6, 2020 █ Rays (Feb 19, 2021) When Disney rejected Mulan and new mutants, it also shelved horror movie Horns, produced by Guillermo del Toro. It now premieres online in July as part of San Diego Comic-Con. David Copperfield's release in the U.S. was also postponed, as was the thriller The Woman in the Window. Original release date: April 17, 2020 █ Unrepentantly (Feb 26, 2021) Michael B Jordan stars in this Tom Clancy adaptation, which has been shuffled mercilessly back in 2021. Original release date: September 18, 2020 █ King's Man (Feb 26, 2021) Ralph Fiennes is fit for King's Man, a World War I-era prequel to the Kingsman film series. Original release date: September 18, 2020 █ Ghostbusters: The Afterlife (March 5, 2021) On March 31, Sony took the decision to move its entire panel of theatrical releases. So Jason Reitman's ghostbusters revival in the small town is pushed from July 2020 to March 5, 2021, taking Sony's slot originally intended for uncharted video game adaptation. Original release date: July 10, 2020 █ The Many Saints of Newark (March 12, 2021) Newark's Many Saints is a 60s set prequel to the classic TV series The Sopranos, in which Michael Gandolfini takes on the role of Tony Soprano made famous by his father James Gandolfini. Original release date: September 25, 2020 █ Wife and the Last Dragon (March 12, 2021) Original release date: November 2020 █ Morbius (March 19, 2021) As part of Sony's great reshuffle, Marvel's vampire film of Jared Leto Morbius was pushed from July to mid-March next year. Original release date: July 31, 2020 █ F9 (April 2, 2021) Starring Vin Diesel, John Cena and Charfize Theron, the ninth Fast and Furious film was scheduled to open in May 2020. But it was one of the first to reschedule, taking the bold step of moving almost a year to April 2021 - a date previously intended for the next film in the fast-paced saga. It is not yet known when the 10th and final film will be released. Original release date: May 2020 █ Bios (April 16, 2021) Tom Hanks is the last person on earth, hanging out with his loyal robot in this post-apocalyptic drama. Original release date: October 2020 █ Monster Hunter (April 23, 2021) Original release date: 2020 █ Quiet Place Part II (April 23, 2021) John Krasinski directs Emily Blunt and Cillian Murphy in Silent Place 2, a post-apocalyptic story of a world where noise equals death. The nearly silent sequel was scheduled to open on March 20, 2020, but with nearly a week to go Paramount announced it was postponing distribution to an unspecified date later this year, before it was postponed again. Seeing the chilling first film in a packed theatre was an important part of the experience, partly because of the strain of trying to eat your snacks very, very quietly. Original release date: March 2020 █ Last night in Soho (April 23, 2021) Edgar Wright's new film is a 60s horror film starring Anya Taylor-Joy and Matt Smith. Original release date: September 25, 2020 █ Shang-chi and Ten Rings (May 7, 2021) Marvel's martial arts action movie starring Siamu Liu as a Mystical Shang-chi fighter was also reshuffled by Disney. Release Date: February 2021 █ Godzilla vs. Kong (May 21, 2021) The monster mash sequel played with its release date even before the virus occurred. In June, Warner Bros. moved it again to avoid a stack of new releases in November. Original release date: November 20, 2020 █ Spiral (May 21, 2021) The rebirth of the Saw franchise starring Chris Rock and Samuel L. Jackson, originally slated for May. This was postponed indefinitely by Lionsgate along with Run and Antebellum before being added back to the calendar a year after its original date. Original release date: May 15, 2020 █ Endless (May 28, 2021) Mark Wahlberg headlines the timeless story of a man who learns his hallucinations and are actually visions from a previous life. Original release date: August 2020 █ AI Higgs (June 18, 2021) This adaptation of Lin-Manuel Miranda and Ciara Allegeria Hades' Tony-winning musical directed by John M. Cho, who also led the wrantic rich Asians, and stars Anthony Ramos, a graduate of the Cast of Hamilton on Broadway. Original release date: June 2020 █ Venom: Let There Be Carnage (June 25, 2021) Sequel to 2018 super villain sniper stars Tom Hardy and Woody Harelson as marvel bad guys Ares and Carnage. Andy Serkis directs. Original release date: October 2020 █ Top Gun: Maverick (July 2, 2021) In April, the Flying Tom Cruise sequel was pushed from June to December. We've waited more than 30 years for the original 1986 sequel to Love in the Sky, so what's a few more months? Original release date: June 2020 █ Uncharted (July 6, 2021) Uncharted, starring Tom Holland, was the first of next year's blockbusters to officially move. He jumped around the schedule a few times for March, then October, and back to July. Original release date: December 2020 █ Tomorrow's War (July 23, 2021) Chris Pratt stars in the original sci-fi war film. Original release date: December 25, 2020 █ Minions: The Rise of Gru (July 2, 2021) Animated sequel/spinoff Minions: Rise of the Gru postponed by a year. He was scheduled to be released in the U.S. on July 3, so the delay March 19 was the first sign that the riot would disrupt the summer season. Original release date: July 3, 2020 █ Jungle Cruise (July 30, 2021) Emily Blunt and Devin Johnson take a full-year jungle cruise, which was postponed by Disney. Original release date: July 2020 █ Batman (October 1, 2021) Robert Pattinson dons the bat suit for this suspended DC adventure. Original release date: June 25, 2021 █ Halloween Kills (October 15, 2021) This slashing sequel is in an awkward position because the release date is kind of in the title. You can't really bounce a movie called Halloween to February, can you? So Universal pushed it back a full year to 2021 - which has a knock-on effect on the three scheduled, the end of Halloween, which is now expected in October 2022. Original release date: October 16, 2020 █ Snake Eyes (October 22, 2021) Henry Gouling and Samara weaving a toy with the idea of headlining snake eyes, a ninja-centric spinoff from the GI Joe series of toys and movies. Original release date: October 2020 █ Elvis Presley's biography (November 5, 2021) Baz Luhrmann's Elvis tribute became a notable casualty of the Corona epidemic when Tom Hanks, appearing in the film as Colonel Tom Parker, contracted the Coronavirus. He and his wife, Rita Wilson, have now recovered, and the film will only be delayed a month. Original release date: October 1, 2021 █ Doctor Strange in Multiverse of Madness (March 25, 2022) Fans of Doctor Strange, played by Benedict Cumberbatch, will have to wait before entering Multiverse's Madness thanks to Marvel's reshuffle. Original release date: May 2021 █ Avatar and Star Wars (December 2022 onwards) Christmas 2021 was due to see the long-awaited arrival of James Cameron's Avatar sequel, which will be accompanied by a new Star Wars trilogy the following year. Both franchises will switch in each holiday season through Avatar 5 in 2027. But as the Corona virus pushed more and more blockbusters into 2021, Disney decided in late July to move all seven films back a year. So Avatar 2 will arrive in 2022, Avatar 3 in 2024, Avatar 4 in 2026 and Avatar 5 in 2028. Three Star Wars movies fill the odd years.
